RIVER DREAMING: A JOURNEY IN ACTIVE ENVIRONMENTAL CITIZENSHIP

Paddle up the Dart and discover a new future for you and your community

In September 2018 Nature Workshops will deliver a new course of accredited professional development for outdoor educators. 'River Dreaming – A Journey in Active Environmental Citizenship' will combine an exploration of ancient and modern techniques in personal career and community development with canoeing the River Dart and wild camping.

Totnes & the Dart River, Sat 29th September 10am to Sunday 30th September 1pm

This highly practical workshop will explore concepts of diversity and active participation, exploring what you can do to enhance your career and support your community. Using the habitat for instruction, we will learn from each other to look at ways you can impact your community to help people affect change in their lives for the benefit of our collective future. You will go home with plans to affect positive changes in your own life, your local wildlife and your community.

Costs include all food, drinks and resources:

Basic fee: £130 includes non-accredited certificate from Nature Workshops

Accredited course fee: £180 Laser accredited Level 3 "Active Citizenship in the local Community"

To book your place by contacting alex@natureworkshops.co.uk

Course leader is local ethnobotanist Jane Acton, whose career spans community development, ecology, herbalism and nature based learning, with skills developed in the High Andes, Snowdonia and the Cornish cliffs and countryside. Jane has also managed services in the public sector for very vulnerable families and has published academic work on the impacts of woodlands on mental health.

Nature Workshops is a Cornwall-based social enterprise, working to reconnect children and adults with the natural world. Through outdoors-focused classes, workshops, events and training sessions, people are encouraged to interact with their environment and to experience the physical, mental and social benefits of time spent outdoors.
