

UNIVERSITY OF PLYMOUTH

Staff Networks Guidance

Overview

Staff networks at the University of Plymouth form a core part of our commitment to promote an inclusive environment and diverse community, and are referenced as actions within our Equality Scheme and Athena SWAN action plans.

Under the Equality Act (2010), the University has a legal obligation to ensure our services and policies do not have the effect of putting those who share a certain protected characteristic at a particular disadvantage. Staff Networks help us to achieve this legal obligation by providing a safe space for support as well as acting as critical friends and experts for feedback on policy and process changes

Our current staff networks are:

- LGBT+ Staff Forum
- Staff with Disabilities Network
- Menopause Support Network
- University of Plymouth Women's Network

Staff Networks also provide visible promotion of the University's commitment to equality, diversity and inclusion and help to hold the University to account in its practices to ensure the impact on minoritised and oft-discriminated against groups is taken into account.

In recent years, staff networks have been instrumental in helping the University to achieve its Equality Scheme objectives, for example:

- The LGBT+ Staff Forum wrote and submitted to the Stonewall Workplace Equality Index annually and in the 2019 ranking helped the institution achieve its highest ever position. The network has provided essential feedback into our family friendly policies ensuring they are inclusive and accessible which also supported our Athena SWAN achievements.
- The Women's Network organised their annual Women's Conference as well as a full programme of events to mark the centenary of women's right to vote. The conference, attended by over 120 employees, contributed to our commitment to raising awareness of our actions and activities to promote gender equality through the Athena SWAN framework.
- The LGBT+ Staff Forum launched their Allies network which now has over 200 staff members wearing rainbow lanyards and pledging their support to tackle homophobia, biphobia and transphobia
- All staff networks have been consulted on policy and process changes including the introduction of a Trans policy, a map of gender neutral toilets, maternity and paternity policies and providing key input into the institution's Athena SWAN submission
- The Staff with Disabilities network contributed to the development of employment policies, providing valuable input into the Absence Management policy in particular.

Staff Networks Guidance

University of Plymouth

In addition to the benefits of having networks, participating in and running a network and network events may provide opportunities for individuals to develop essential organisational and communication skills, and should be included within PDR discussions.

This document aims to provide line managers and employees guidance in how to balance involvement within staff networks alongside their paid employment at the University of Plymouth. This document also provides guidance on how to recognise staff network achievement within the PDR process. Staff networks are strongly encouraged and supported by the University and they are a valuable resource in ensuring the University retains a diverse and highly-skilled workforce.

To ensure the success of networks in promoting an inclusive culture, managers should be supportive of their staff participating in staff networks and employees are encouraged to work with their manager to ensure any time commitments are achievable in relation to existing individual and departmental commitments.

This guidance has been developed to provide advice for managers and employees in establishing a sustainable balance in workload.

Working time guidance

Similar to staff involvement in trade union activities, staff involved in staff networks should be given reasonable time to engage and work within their networks; they are integral to University business.

1. Network Chairs/Co-chairs

1.1 Network chairs and co-chairs should be allocated a minimum of 15 hours per year by their manager to complete staff networks duties

1.2 Staff members are expected to have engaged with their manager in deciding how best to utilise these hours

1.3 Staff members should speak with their manager before taking on a leadership role within a staff network and managers are expected to work with the member of staff to decide on the amount of hours allocated

1.4 Managers should consider staff network commitments when planning workloads

1.5 If a member of staff is a chair/co-chair or more than one staff network then it is at the discretion of the manager on how many additional hours on top of the minimum of 15 are allocated

2. Staff Network Members

2.1 Staff members should be allocated a minimum of 8 hours per year by their manager to complete staff networks duties

2.2 Staff members are expected to have engaged with their manager in deciding how best to utilise these hours

2.3 Managers should consider staff network commitments when planning workloads

2.4 If a member of staff is member of more than one staff network then it is at the discretion of the manager on how many additional hours on top of the minimum of 8 are allocated

3. Guidance Restrictions

3.1 Staff network meetings and events should take place within core working hours

3.2 Social events for staff networks are strongly encouraged, however these cannot count toward the 8/15 hour minimum working time allowance unless agreed at the manager's discretion

3.3 In all cases of involvement within staff networks, it is expected that staff and their managers have an open, honest conversation about network involvement.

3.4 It should be the position of the manager to encourage involvement in staff network activities; they cannot stop a staff member from being involved in a staff network.

PDR Guidance

4.1 Involvement in staff networks must be recognised within the PDR process as offering significant contribution to the University (see Fig. 1 - PDR guidance table for suitable objectives).

4.2 The employee must provide detailed evidence to support this within their PDR

4.3 Depending on the evidence supplied, or their role within the staff network, it could fall under personal development objectives.
