

Supporting individuals susceptible to being drawn into violent extremism

The process outlined below aims to support those who are at risk of being drawn into violent extremism. It uses existing partnership working between the police, local authorities, statutory partners and the local community.

Support processes established by multi-agency partners

Resulting in a considered, balanced and proportionate response that ensures the most appropriate level of support is provided.

There is no single profile of a person likely to be involved in terrorism or violent extremism. However, experience has shown that there can be early warning signs most likely to be identified by family, friends and professionals which are indicative of the need for support.

The earlier we can identify and provide appropriate support, the more effective this support is likely to be.

You can be reassured that any information received will be handled sensitively and treated with the strictest of confidence.
